The Union of North American Indian Tribal Nations Legal Tender Token (UNAITN) is an issuer-defined digital instrument structured to represent economic participation in, and facilitation of, commercial activity across Native American and Indigenous tribal jurisdictions throughout North America. The token is designed to operate as a flexible, open-use legal-tenderâ€“anchored unit that can be adopted within sovereign tribal economies, inter-tribal trade frameworks, and affiliated commercial ecosystems.

UNAITN acknowledges and operates within the broader historical and legal context of sovereign treaties and agreements involving Native American and Indigenous nations and external sovereign states, including but not limited to the United States of America, Spain, the United Kingdom, France, and other countries. Where applicable under such treaty frameworks and recognitions, UNAITN is structured to support use in global trade, settlement, and cross-border economic participation involving tribal entities and their international counterparts.
